A Woman Enemy.

(Chicago News.)
An actor who is thoroughly convinced of the vindictiveness of women relates this anecdote in support of his opinion. I had a woman enemy once. She was leading woman in the company when I was leading man. On the stage we were lovers. Off the stage we didn't even speak when we met. I had a scene with her in which I had to clasp her in my arms, while her head sunk on my breast. I wore a frock coat and a beautiful light settin scarf. And what did that woman do? She used to make up with grease paint and when her head sunk on my breast she used to make up with grease paint and when her head sunk on my breast she used to make up with grease paint and when her head sunk on my breast she used to rub her check against my the and—well, a light satin the with red and grease paint on it isn't a thing of beauty. Mr. Tompkine had never given this subject any thought, and was hardly inequired to answer offhand.

"Why, why," he said, stumblingly, "It's so because it is, I suppose."

"Well," said Tommy, since I am your father, I am going to give you a licket to a thaire and a half-dollar besides. I always said that if I was a good time while you're young. I never had a chance myself."

Mr. Tompkins gased in blank astonishment at Tommy, Slowly the significance of the hint dawned upon hin. Producing the coin, he said:

"Take it, Thomas. When you really do become a father, I hope it won't be your misfortune to have a son who is smarter than yourself."
